School for Nurses.

The Philadelphia School for Nurses in alliance with the American National Red Cross has undertaken to train a sufficient number of young women who shall be subject to the call of the Red Cross or the government for prompt nursing service in the event of national calamities or in case of war.

Coincident with this plan an effort will be made to carry nursing skill and hospital knowledge into small towns and rural districts of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, and Maryland, by taking some of their young women and training them in this science.

Any young woman who aspires to Red Cross membership or to nursing service in any capacity can get full information by addressing the Philadelphia School for Nurses, Witherspoon Building, Philadelphia, Pa. The movement is designed especially to benefit young women in small towns and rural communities.

Attorney-General's Opinion.

The official opinion of Attorney-General McCarter as to which election officers are to take charge of the primary elections will be conclusive upon all election officers and other State officials; but that result is reached solely by the fact that in an Attorney-General is supposed to be vested the power of killing a statute law by implication.

TRAINING A LION.

A Daring Performance That Had a Very Simple Explanation.

Not long ago a lion tamer who was exhibiting in a German circus in Holland attracted immense crowds at every performance by doing what seemed to be the most daring of acts in the lions' cage. He would climb into the cage with great pieces of meat and throw it to the roaring beasts. The moment they had leaped upon it he would spring among them and put his foot on it. The animals would growl furiously, and then, just as the spectators were all waiting breathlessly, expecting that the beasts would tear him to pieces, they would shrink back, cowed. After he had repeated this exciting act for many days an Englishman made a wager with him for a big sum of money that he would not dare to do it after the lions had been starved for three days. The trainer considered for a moment and then accepted the wager, making only the condition that he be allowed to have three weeks of preparation.

At the end of three weeks the trainer announced that he was ready, and the process of starving the lions began. The Englishman kept guards posted around the cage day and night to make certain that not a morsel of food should be given to the animals. At the expiration of the three days all Amsterdam rushed to the circus. The lions were maddened with hunger, as any one could see and hear, for they roared continually, and their attempts to break through the bars showed how angry they had become. In the height of the uproar the trainer entered the cage with an immense piece of beef in his arms. He tossed it on the floor of the cage, raised his whip and, lo, not one lion dared to approach it. The mighty brutes lay crouched, roaring and growling so hard that their great frames shook, and each kept his terrific yellow eyes fixed hungrily on the meat. But not one of them stirred.

The trainer stooped, lifted the beef and tossed it to them again, and in a moment the lions were in a great tawny ball, rending and snarling and tearing, with blood from the mangled beef spurting all over the cage. The Englishman paid his bet and then tried to find out how the lion tamer had acquired such wonderful control over his beasts. At first the man would not tell, but at last he consented to explain it. During the three weeks' period of preparation he had always starved the lions from the very beginning. Then, on the fourth day, he would enter the cage with a piece of beef which had been soaked in kerosene oil. The lions would no sooner pounce upon it than they would shrink away, sickened by the stench. Then he would throw them a fresh and good piece of beef, which they would devour in a moment. The lions soon became so accustomed to expecting that the first piece of beef that was thrown to them was not good that at the end of three days they would not even move from their corners when the trainer threw it on the floor of the cage. They would not try to eat anything except the second piece. So the daring trick had a very simple explanation.—Washington Post.

Irving as a Tipster.

Sir Henry Irving's prodigality toward servants was well illustrated some years ago when he was at Bluff Point, Lake Champlain. He gave the driver of the break which daily ran to Au Sable Chasm $50 in two weeks and feed the other servants with like recklessness. The guests of the hotel grew very indignant, because there was no getting along with the employees, who almost literally fought among themselves to minister to the needs of the English actor and sadly neglected the rest of the guests.

Mr. Salisbury Pleaded.

When Monroe Salisbury left the Empire City track for the Grand Circuit he consigned fourteen head of horses to Maxfield's care. These were to be worked for speed in his absence. Some of them were right off the farm, and when he returned Maxfield had to show him every one so that he might note the progress each one had made. Daphne Direct, a 3-year-old pacer, stepped a mile in 2.17, a quarter in 30.4 seconds, and an eighth in 14.4 seconds. The Wizard, by Directum, a 4-year-old, showed a mile in 2.25, last quarter in 34 seconds. This fellow when Maxfield got him would not go the right way of the track and would make seven or eight breaks in a mile. Maxfield kept him away from the track ten days and then drove him in about three minutes.

Mr. Salisbury was very much pleased with his mile in 2.25. Indirectly, a poorly gaited horse, stepped a quarter in 33.4 seconds. Degols, by Belisario, showed the greatest improvement. She stepped a quarter in company with her brother Monroe in 31 seconds, and beat him three lengths. She was then hitched to a sulky and made a quarter in 29.4 seconds. This performance delighted Mr. Salisbury, who said she was another Lea Dillon. He told Maxfield that he had done what no other driver had ever accomplished—taken a mare from pasture and in five weeks to a day drove her a quarter in better than 30 seconds. Maxfield will go to California in charge of the Salisbury stables this winter.

To Visit Polling Places.

The members of the County Board of Elections at a meeting held Tuesday decided to personally visit the different registration places in the county on the three days when voters are being registered, and also to go to the polling places on election day. It is thought that by so doing the members of the board will be able to settle the disputes that so frequently occur at these places, and that they will in this way be able to prevent disorder. The commissioners will see to it that the different places are kept clean and that the election officers do their work in a proper, courteous way.

The motion providing for these trips was made by Commissioner Hartt, and it promptly met with the approval of the other members of the board. Mr. Hartt declared that petty differences frequently led to serious disputes at the polling places. If the members personally visited these places, he said, they would in all probability be able to do good work and so smooth the way for efficient election service. The motion was adopted.
